New County Extension Youth Agent speaks

Alicia Criswell, the new Wayne County Health and Human Services/4H Leader, spoke before members of the Centerville Lions Club Monday evening, November 25. She discussed the 4H program and what is being done to increase participation and improve the program.

Following graduation from Ball State University in 2008, she taught Family and Consumer Sciences at Greenfield and Beech Grove High Schools. She earned her Master's degree in Family and Consumer Sciences from BSU this year. Since beginning her position with the Extension office, she has focused on Health and Human Sciences identifying community needs and resources, and beginning programs to meet those needs.

She said her areas of focus for the 4H program are increasing enrollment, identifying and reaching under served populations, and increasing enrollment and involvement in Wayne Township. She is also seeking volunteers to serve as 4H leaders.

Lion Blue gives club updates on projects

Lion Bob Blue updated members on eye glasses and health equipment at the clubs regular meeting Monday evening, November 24.

Blue reported 140 eye glasses were collected from collection boxes at area churches during the past two weeks and taken to the Richmond Lions Club. Richmond member Rollie North heads up that program. Blue said many of the donated glasses appears almost new.

Blue is nearing completion of the inventory of health related items the club has for loan. He has prepared letters asking members to help in locating wheel chairs that have been loaned.
