Wayne County 4-H STEM program explained

The Wayne County 4-H STEM program was explained to members of the Centerville Lions Club Monday evening, March 12, at the Centerville Senior Center. STEM (science, technology, engineering, math) was recently adopted by the Wayne County Purdue University Cooperative Extension Service.

Extension Educator Alicia Criswell told Lions one of the exciting programs is the evGrandPrix program. She said they learned about the program last November and were approved in January with 50% funding. Criswell said a team of high school 4-H members will build an electric go-cart and participate in racing competition as well as business aspects. Learn more about the program at: <http://evgrandprix.org>. The evGrandPrix finals will be May 15-16 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The local 4-H STEM program includes numerous other categories for students. Wayne and Marion Counties were the only areas in Indiana to be approved to take part.

The club voted to contribute $200 towards the program.
